Tramper TWS is acclaimed best
For achieving success on the BBC Top Gear show

“Hands down, the best by far”

Tramper TWS (Three Wheeled Scooter) was one of 3 all terrain mobility vehicles featured on last Sunday's Top Gear TV programme. Following the usual format there was a challenge for the production machines to beat those made by the 3 presenters. They voted the Tramper TWS the best one at the end of the show.

Despite being the cheapest of the 3, TWS excelled in scaling the muddy, wet course in the Brecon Beacons without any fuss, and without any breakdowns. At £4983 as specified, and Class 3 compliant (which starts from £4470), TWS is a lot less than the TGA HD Breeze 4S GT at £5490 and the powered wheelchair at over £14,000.

Three injured soldiers were brought by the Help for Heroes charity to carry out the challenge. Ex-marine Benjamin McBean (Ben) rode the TWS and was seen helping the other machines to complete the course, pushing them from the rear. Since this was a team event – and not a race between them – staying at the rear providing help to the others seemed appropriate.

Ben was the only one to tackle the toughest slippery and rutted slope, which was hard going, and after reaching the finish line TWS still had 30% battery capacity left, while the others had virtually expired.

It was good to see the British designed and produced Tramper was the dominant machine. TWS is designed to be an ALL terrain trike, as all Trampers are. So it will happily carry you to the supermarket as well as over the Brecon Beacons as it did on Top Gear.
